Salary:

£41,421—£55,295 pro rata

Contract:

Fixed-Term (Maternity Cover)

Location:

Central Cambridge

Faculty / Department:

Department of Architecture

Responsible to:

Head of Department

Working pattern:

Part-time

The University of Cambridge has a Hybrid Working Policy that aims to enable as many staff as possible to work in a hybrid way if they so wish, whilst recognising that some roles will include tasks that can only be performed on University premises.

Role Summary

Applications are invited for up to two Design Teaching Fellows in the Department of Architecture. These part-time posts are available as maternity cover from 1 January until 31 July 2025, working within the 1st-year studio teaching team. The posts are fractional, i.e., 25.3% of full time, c. 9 hours per week, – both in and out of term time.

The purpose of the Design Teaching Fellow post is to teach architectural design on the three-year undergraduate BA (Architecture Tripos), the new Master of Design and the MArch course, which lead to RIBA/ARB Part I and Part II qualifications respectively.

The Design Teaching Fellow position is designed primarily for practitioners with experience in studio teaching, who are active in design research and up to date professional skills to deliver excellent teaching that benefits from and engages with Cambridge's research rich environment and is intellectually challenging.

The Role of a Design Teaching Fellow

Across all courses Design Teaching Fellows will deliver group teaching and/or one-to-one supervisions, as appropriate to the year level, subject to agreement with Design Teaching Fellows and Head of Department.

The Design Teaching Fellows teach based upon an approximate 1:8 staff:student ratio and whilst most of the teaching is conducted in the studio groups, there may be some horizontal teaching across year groups.

Design Teaching Fellows are responsible for the development and delivery of studio teaching. Working with, and supported by, either the undergraduate Studio Teaching Coordinator or Course Director for MArch, they will develop course content and material in response to changes in the programme or student feedback, and co-ordinate the work of students. They will be involved in student life from admission to examination, and beyond, providing marks, feedback and advice, and references, as appropriate.

In addition to working directly with the students, they will be a valued community within the department - undertaking administrative duties as relevant to teaching responsibilities and projects, contributing to planning of outreach courses, policy making, accreditation and course development. Through this service to the department and wider University they, along with all colleagues, will promote collegiality and engender a culture of mutual respect.

Tripods (BArch and MDes)

In the first year, all students are taught in one studio and throughout the degree Design Teaching Fellows create briefs to which the students respond on an individual basis.

Over the course of a year it is anticipated that Design Fellows will:

- Teach c. 9 hours per week during the 9 weeks of term. Studio teachers are expected to attend in Cambridge at least one day a week during term-time and studio days are set.
- Take part in site visits, up to 12 hours per academic year
- Assess/examiner students through an end-of-term crit - up to 9 hours for each Design Teaching Fellow each term
- Take 8 hours per term of Professional Development
- Attend two departmental away days each academic year
- Spend 40 hours over the course of the year on preparation work to develop studio teaching that benefits from the research rich environment of the University and Department. This will include writing briefs, liaising with Director of Studies, arranging external visiting critics, writing termly student reports and liaising with the model making workshop on material requirements for the studio.

The Department does not specify when preparation work takes place, but it is anticipated that any days where attendance is required take place within the c. 10 weeks of school term-time. Design Teaching Fellows may be asked to undertake admissions work but this will be remunerated separately, by Department or College as appropriate and is not within the 0.253FTE.

Our Design Teaching Fellows all bring their own individual expertise to the department and therefore may choose on occasion to take on additional tasks at their discretion. Where the Department requests additional tasks outside the core workload above, discussions will include additional remuneration.

All staff have a duty to ensure that relevant Departmental Health and Safety and Ethics policies are adhered to in their work with students - this includes the creation of risk assessments as needed.

The University

The University of Cambridge is consistently ranked one of the best universities in the world, achieving academic excellence through its Faculties, Departments and other Institutions, together with the 31 Colleges.

The University is renowned for its record of discovery and innovation. It is one of the great institutions, with a regional, national and global reach, attracting the very best and brightest minds. Our staff and students shape the world around us for the better: we attract and partner with like-minded people.

Whether contributing to the development of new anti-cancer drugs, adding to the understanding of how black holes are formed, revolutionising the study of ancient settlements, convening academic expertise to offer solutions to the climate crisis, or analysing public attitudes towards democracy around the world, the University's research is remarkable in its breadth, quality and impact. The University also sits at the heart of Europe's largest technology cluster and has catalysed more than 1,500 high-tech companies. And yet what inspires our 24,000 students and 13,000 staff is not what has already been achieved, but what is possible in the future.

The education and experience of our students, based on a partnership between the University's academic Departments and Faculties and the 31 Colleges, is second to none. Every student is a member of one of the Colleges, each a community of students, academics and staff drawn from across the University's comprehensive range of subject areas.

The University is a self-governing community, with a system for decision-making that provides a high degree of accountability and transparency to its members. Each Department and Faculty is part of one of six academic Schools, but each of them, and each individual academic, has a great deal of autonomy. The Colleges are independent and self-governing, working in a symbiotic relationship with the University.

The University has a number of Institutions that are independent of any Faculty or Department and are not part of the academic Schools. These include the Institute of Continuing Education (which provides high-quality education to adults throughout their lives), the Fitzwilliam Museum, Kettle's Yard (an historic house and gallery that holds important collections of modern art) and the University Library. In addition to their diverse contributions to University and public life, these non-School Institutions are also important centres of teaching and research.

Cambridge University Press & Assessment provides academic publishing, examinations and learning materials worldwide, supporting the dissemination of research, academic development at school and in higher education, and international student mobility. Legally, the Press & Assessment is a department of the University. It provides very important funds to invest in the academic purposes of the University.

The University has made truly remarkable contributions to the sum of human understanding, with breakthrough ideas and discoveries that have changed the way we understand ourselves, our planet, and the universe around us. Yet the global and national contexts in which it operates are fast-changing and increasingly filled with uncertainty. In a world that is becoming - politically, economically, socially, and technologically – ever more interconnected but even less equal, the University's mission – “to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and

About Us

The University is one of the world's leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country's highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit undergraduate students, provide student accommodation and pastoral support and deliver small group teaching for undergraduates.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany's Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University's make-up.

“Through its outstanding education, research and innovation, the University of Cambridge has made - and continues to make - a lasting contribution to human knowledge and is flourishing. By working at the University of Cambridge, you will be joining a vibrant community of students, scholars and professional services staff, committed to supporting and enhancing the University's mission to contribute to society.”

Professor Deborah Prentice,
Vice Chancellor, 2023
