Contract:

Fixed-Term, 2 years in the first instance

Location:

Faculty / Department:

Cambridge Research Office

Responsible to:

Senior Contracts Manager

Working pattern:

Full-time/Part-time

The University of Cambridge has a Hybrid Working Policy that aims to enable as many staff as possible to work in a hybrid way if they so wish, whilst recognising that some roles will include tasks that can only be performed

Purpose of the role

The Research Contracts Specialist (International and Institutional) role will support the contracts function within the ROO through the reviewing, drafting and negotiation of a range of research contracts with a wide range of research sponsors and partners. The Research Operations Office (ROO) is structured around School facing teams that support the academic departments within them.

This post will be based in the Research Office Arts, Humanities, Social Sciences and International Team and be line managed by the Senior Contracts Manager AHSS/ International. The post-holder will thereby benefit from being part of a School based team whilst gaining experience across all of the Research Operations Office School teams through managing a cross-school contracts portfolio encompassing for example ODA funded projects . Cross-school working will be an integral part of the training and will enable the post-holder to gain a breadth of experience incorporating elements that are more specific to particular Schools' needs in addition to the usual range of responsibilities for the role.

The training will also focus on skills that are common to all disciplines. These will involve skills in identifying and drafting contract terms that ensure the University retains access to the results of research for further use or commercialisation, reducing legal liability, securing optimal payment terms and ensuring the protection of fundamental academic principles (such as the right to publish results), as well as broader aspects such as assessing risk and providing advice and guidance on costing and pricing.

As the post-holder gains experience, they will be able to use their knowledge of the contract negotiation process to help support and guide academics through it, liaising where necessary with other functional teams within the ROO to help ensure projects are set up smoothly and with all the necessary documentation and process requirements in place.

Should any system improvements be required, the role-holder (in conjunction with Senior Contracts Managers and other functional managers) may play a role in designing and introducing improvements.

The post-holder will be responsible for developing and maintaining good working relationships with academic departments, administrative colleagues, other universities and external sponsors in order to provide the highest level of service to the University of Cambridge's research operations.

Working with the Contracts Managers and Senior Contracts Managers to put in place appropriate agreements in order to facilitate research funding and carrying out a 'project management' role to guide academics and funders through the University processes to enable research projects to get up and running. This involves drafting, reviewing and negotiating research related contracts (such as agreements covering research funding, studentships, confidentiality, material transfer and software) for all departments in the relevant Schools.

Protecting the University's access to the results of research for further use or commercialisation, reducing legal liability, assessing risk, providing advice and guidance on costing and pricing, seeking optimal payment terms and academic publication rights.

The University

The University of Cambridge is consistently ranked one of the best universities in the world, achieving academic excellence through its Faculties, Departments and other Institutions, together with the 31 Colleges.

The University is renowned for its record of discovery and innovation. It is one of the great institutions, with a regional, national and global reach, attracting the very best and brightest minds. Our staff and students shape the world around us for the better: we attract and partner with like-minded people.

Whether contributing to the development of new anti-cancer drugs, adding to the understanding of how black holes are formed, revolutionising the study of ancient settlements, convening academic expertise to offer solutions to the climate crisis, or analysing public attitudes towards democracy around the world, the University's research is remarkable in its breadth, quality and impact. The University also sits at the heart of Europe's largest technology cluster and has catalysed more than 1,500 high-tech companies. And yet what inspires our 24,000 students and 13,000 staff is not what has already been achieved, but what is possible in the future.

The education and experience of our students, based on a partnership between the University's academic Departments and Faculties and the 31 Colleges, is second to none. Every student is a member of one of the Colleges, each a community of students, academics and staff drawn from across the University's comprehensive range of subject areas.

The University is a self-governing community, with a system for decision-making that provides a high degree of accountability and transparency to its members. Each Department and Faculty is part of one of six academic Schools, but each of them, and each individual academic, has a great deal of autonomy. The Colleges are independent and self-governing, working in a symbiotic relationship with the University.

The University has a number of Institutions that are independent of any Faculty or Department and are not part of the academic Schools. These include the Institute of Continuing Education (which provides high-quality education to adults throughout their lives), the Fitzwilliam Museum, Kettle's Yard (an historic house and gallery that holds important collections of modern art) and the University Library. In addition to their diverse contributions to University and public life, these non-School Institutions are also important centres of teaching and research.

Cambridge University Press & Assessment provides academic publishing, examinations and learning materials worldwide, supporting the dissemination of research, academic development at school and in higher education, and international student mobility. Legally, the Press & Assessment is a department of the University. It provides very important funds to invest in the academic purposes of the University.

The University has made truly remarkable contributions to the sum of human understanding, with breakthrough ideas and discoveries that have changed the way we understand ourselves, our planet, and the universe around us. Yet the global and national contexts in which it operates are fast-changing and increasingly filled with uncertainty. In a world that is becoming - politically, economically, socially, and technologically – ever more interconnected but even less equal, the University's mission – “to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and

About Us

The University is one of the world's leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country's highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit undergraduate students, provide student accommodation and pastoral support and deliver small group teaching for undergraduates.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany's Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University's make-up.

“Through its outstanding education, research and innovation, the University of Cambridge has made - and continues to make - a lasting contribution to human knowledge and is flourishing. By working at the University of Cambridge, you will be joining a vibrant community of students, scholars and professional services staff, committed to supporting and enhancing the University's mission to contribute to society.”

Professor Deborah Prentice,
Vice Chancellor, 2023
